

The Second Creation

IX

So then all of a sudden the face of the earth just became bright.
There was no sun.
But there was one who glorified himself,
7 Parrot by name.
Already there was heaven
And earth,
But totally hidden was the face of the sun
And the moon.
And he said this:
"It is nothing but the bright sign of the people that drowned. 830
Like that of magic people
Is their essence.
I am great,
And shall be over
The formed people,
The shaped people.
I am its sun,
And I am its light.
And I am also its moon when there comes to be one.
Great is my brightness! 840
I am the path,
And I am the track for the people.
From silver my eyes just flash,
Shining with green jade,

824. 7 Parrot is obviously a day name but not in the Quiche calendar. I believe it to be derived from Nahuatl cozcaquauhtli 'collar eagle, turkey buzzard' via Pipil cocozquauhtli 'yellow eagle' (also called tecolotl 'owl'), the 16th day (in the Quiche count ah mak 'owl, sinner'). I am guessing that the folk equation was facilitated by the phonetic similarity between Pipil cocoz- 'very yellow' and Quiche kaq-ix 'red feather, parrot'. The Pipil glyph for this day depicts an old man with a parrot-like beak. The divinatory meaning of 7 Owl is the same as for 7 Hunter; see note to line 1693. The principal parrots of Guatemala are the macaw (Ara spp.), the Amazon parrot (Amazona spp.), the conure (Aratinga spp.), and the tovi (Brotogerys jugularis). The first or second is probably the Quiche kaqix; the third may be k'el, the fourth ix go.

830. FX and SJ omit zaq; BB and GR either omit it or mangle it (? 'is extraordinary'). VR mistranslate etal as 'learning'; AR interprets it as a reference to the 'sign' of line 817, but BX catch the nearer reference of zaq to line 821, a much more likely referent for 7 Parrot's re-

834. I read in for i.

838. The MS has pu for puch.

839. Ta ch ux ok 'so be it' is very common. It is mishandled here by BB, GR, and SJ.

841-2. This has been generally read as chakabal 'crawl, stand'; AR, VR, and VC read chakobal 'conquest'. The former is textual and scans poetically. BX erroneously give chakabral in their text but translate correctly. All translations ignore the substantival character of the inflection. SJ has im for in; the blurred letter in the MS indeed suggests this.

843. Puvaq is 'metal', principally silver but including also gold, copper, tin, or iron. In modern Quiche it means 'money'.

844. Raxa q'u'al 'green gem, jade'. Jade beads and pendants occur albeit rarely from the earliest levels at Zacualpa (Wauchope, 1948, p. 14).

The Second Creation

And my teeth also are bright blue
 With stones, like the face of heaven.
 So too my nose is brightly gleaming
 At a distance, like the moon,
 And my throne is silver.
 Bright lie the surfaces of the earth
 850 When I come down
 Before my throne.
 So I am the sun then,
 And I am the moon
 For those born of brightness,
 Those engendered of brightness,
 When it comes about
 That at a distance my face should appear,"
 Said 7 Parrot,
 But it was not true
 860 That 7 Parrot was the sun.
 He was just glorifying himself,
 His plumes
 And silver.
 But his appearance was just piercing where he sat
 there,
 And his appearance was not piercing everything under heaven.
 For nothing much had yet been seen
 Of the face of the sun
 And moon
 And stars.
 870 Nothing had yet brightened then,
 As 7 Parrot was boasting
 About suns
 And moons.
 It was just that nothing had yet appeared,
 Had yet been manifested
 Of the sun's brilliance
 Or the moon's.
 He just wanted greatness
 And exaltation.

845. BX translate 'beak' rather than 'nose'. The reference is probably to a nose plug or nose button; see note to line 7295.

854. The MS has pu for puch.

855-6. Al-q'ahol may mean 'vassal' and is so interpreted here by FX and BB. AR suggests 'the human race (linaje humano)' and WC agrees '(das Geschlecht der Menschen)'. Neither reading accommodates the suffix -il.

863. Xik' 'wing, feather' is translated 'precious stone'

by BB, 'jadeite' by GR. FX gives 'riches', a legitimate connotation of feathers in Maya.

865-6. Parallelism requires reading the verbs as tokoh 'stab' and kopoh 'prick'.

867. All translations have ignored the particle I read as k'i 'much, many' except SJ, who gives 'indeed (fürwahr)', and BX, who insert 'then (pues)'.

873-4. The generalizing suffix -il has been generally ignored.

880. Perhaps the form should be iq'oven.

Of the dolls

 And so we shall tell further
 When 7 Parrot died,
 When he was humiliated
 When people were made
 By Former
 And Shaper.

X

This is the root of the humiliation,
 The shaking down
 In the day of 7 Parrot
 By the two sons.
 Hunter was the name of one.
 Jaguar Deer was the name of the second.
 But they were gods.
 So they saw the evil
 Which was the boasting
 He was trying to do
 Before the Heart of Heaven,
 And the sons said,
 "It is not good that this should come about.
 People won't be able to live
 Here

891-3. This is the 'root' (that is, the reason) for the destruction of 7 Parrot and his sons. The verbs are intransitive infinitives, and q'ih 'sun, day' is the object of the preposition chi.

894. They are later revealed to be the sons of 1 Hunter and Blood Woman. The genealogy gets somewhat hard to follow:

VC quaintly refers to the whole group as "the Ahpu family".

896. See note to line 4825. Hunter is the 20th day of the calendar; Deer is the 7th.

898. Literally, 'evil they saw it'. The verbal suffix -o is utterance terminal. Cf. the lack of this suffix in the next couplet and in line 957. Cf. also line 916. VR's translation of this passage (lines 897-917) is particularly loose and inaccurate.

904. A difficult phrase, subtly differentiated by the translators:

VR's conversion of the verb into a noun is unnecessary, and BB's past tense implication is precluded by the aspect marker chi and the inceptive suffix -e. GR's reading, making 7 Parrot the subject, is precluded by the use of the term vinaq; 7 Parrot would certainly be achik if not ahav (cf. line 1060). The emphasis in SJ (ja), RK (ved' . . . eschë), and BX (ni) is in the context but not in the text, and FX's porque is gratuitous.

 So let us try to shoot him.
 After his dinner we might shoot him.
 Thus we might make him sick

 For so it does,
 Lest all of the people

 Was what the boys said,
 Each with a blowgun,
 Which they shouldered, both together.

915-21. This is difficult and is mishandled by the existing translations:

The versification is coerced by the utterance terminal -o and the parallel vinaq: vinaqir. The post-verbal particle vi is not uncommonly terminal also. All the translations ignore the fact that k'ak'abeh and bano are transitive verbs and that they have explicit objects (u). All of them omit are 'this'. BB omits k u in the first line. BX omit ta ch ux ok in both text and translation. The implication of the passage is that 7 Parrot's vainglory and avarice endanger the proper dedication of mankind to the glorification of the gods.

Now this 7 Parrot
 Had two sons.
 The first was a certain Alligator,
 While the second was a certain 2 Leg,
 And Shield Bearer was the name of their mother,
 The wife of 7 Parrot.
 And this Alligator,
 He was one to play with the great mountains:
 Fire Mouth,
 1 Hunter,
 Cave Falls River,
 Yellow Woman,
 Overflowings,
 Full of Holes,
 To recite
 The names of the mountains
 That were there to be brightened
 And to be created in just one night by Alligator.
 Then, too, this 2 Leg shook the mountains
 By moving around —
 The little mountains
 And big mountains —
 So that it was only as a way of bragging
 That the sons of 7 Parrot did this.
 "Behold me, I am the sun!"
 Said 7 Parrot.
 "Behold me, I am the maker of the earth!"
 Said Alligator.

927. Cipacna is the Nahuatl Cipactonal 'day of the alligator', an Aztec divinatory god; see note to line 33. BB, VR, BX, and VC offer Quiche etymologies, and GR gives 'wise fish earth' on some basis. FX has Sipacua throughout. The Nahuatl cipactli corresponds to the Quiche day name imox. WC translates the name 'the strong'. Alligator heads are very common decorations on the feet of tripod bowls beginning in the 13th century (Tohil Phase) at Zacualpa, though other seemingly calendrical effigies are also found (Wauchope, 1948, pp. 138-9). The animal from which the day is named is probably Caiman fuscus; it is restricted to the lowlands (Tozzer, 1941, p. 248).

928. 2 Leg refers to a Yucatecan day name corresponding to 2 Dog in Nahuatl and Quiche; see note to line 184. WC calls him 'the shaker'. GR reads 'earth giant'. The divinatory meaning of 2 Dog may be remotely relevant. The Chol Poval, Ahilabal Q'ih says:

Those of red faces,
 Those of stupid faces,
 Those of crooked hearts,
 Centipede is their spirit.
 It says evil days,
 All five of them.

929. Chimalmat (Nahuatl chimalmatl 'shield bearer') is the mother of Quetzalcoatl in Aztec tradition and the second wife of Iztac Mixcoatl (white cloud serpent), the first father of the Nahua. Though the name is Nahuatl, it can be read as a Quiche verb; see line 987.

933. Fuego Volcano, department of Sacatepequez, southwest of Antigua.

934. Agua Volcano, department of Sacatepequez, southeast of Antigua.

935. Acatenango Volcano, department of Sacatepequez, slightly south of west from Antigua.

936. Etymology obscure, though the reading Q'aq' Ix Q'anil 'yellow woman volcano' seems plausible; Santa María Volcano, southwest of the city of Quezaltenango.

937. Zunil Volcano, Quezaltenango.

938. An unidentified volcano, perhaps Tajumulco. Huehuetenango is called chi Nab Hul. VC identifies this as San Pedro Volcano.

939-41. Omitted by FX.

943. BB has q'ut for q'u ri.

944. WC and others read the intransitive verb as transitive.

949. Ix may be an error for in; cf. line 951.

950. Omitted by FX.

The Second Creation

"And it is I who shake the sky
And sunder the whole earth," said 2 Leg.
Just so were the sons of 7 Parrot.
Just so they took their greatness after their father.
And this evil the sons saw —
That nothing would be accomplished then
By our first Mother,
Our first Father, 960
And so their death had to be planned,
And their destruction by the two sons.

XI

And this then was the shooting of 7 Parrot
By the two sons.
We shall tell of the humiliation of each one of them
Who was glorifying himself.
Now 7 Parrot had a great tree,
A nance,
And that was the food of 7 Parrot.
What he sucked was the nance fruit. 970
So he climbed up the tree every day,
And this feeding having been seen
By Hunter
And Jaguar Deer,
They therefore lay in wait for 7 Parrot under the tree.
The two sons were completely hidden there in the leaves of the tree,
And when 7 Parrot arrived,
And stopped
Over the food —
The nance — 980
Then of course he was shot by them.
1 Hunter aimed the blowgun pellet

953. I read in for i. Bunzel reports from Chichicastenango (1952, p. 428): "They say of the earthquake, that there is a giant under the earth, bound by his hands and feet, and when there is a slight tremor, it is because he has moved his hands or feet a little; and when he turns over on the other side is when there are strong earthquakes." According to the Popol Vuh, both Alligator and 2 Leg are buried, but only the latter is tied. See line 1657 ff.

956. WC has 'they disputed about glory with their father' but this is an unwarranted reading of the verb qam 'take'. BB has xa vi x chi vi.

962. Ki zachik omitted by FX.

965. BX have x ch'a for x chi.

968. The nance (Byrsonima corinifolia vel crassifolia) is a wild tree with an edible fruit not unlike a yellow cherry.

970. I read ok for o.

972. BB, GR, and VR read r echabal as the feeding of Hunter and Jaguar Deer, which is negated by the singular pronoun and the nominalized form. It is clear that r umal in the following line must refer to the verb 'seen' rather than to 'feeding'. The inflection of iloma is obscure.

975. Perhaps this should read q'aq'alín.

976. I read ulo for ulo.

982. The use of the numeral in the name of 1 Hunter occurs also in lines 988, 991, 995, 999, 1016, and 1017.
The numeral is consistently omitted in earlier and later portions of the text, e.g., lines 973 and 1133. There may be a confusion of Hunter with his father, described in line 1688 ff., though numerals are freely omitted or included in calendar names, and both may have been 1
Hunter. See also note to line 4193.

So that it would hit his mouth,
 So that it would break his jaw.
 Since he had climbed up the tree,
 He fell flat on the ground
 And went sprawling.
 Then 1 Hunter came running up.
 Actually he came up to grab him,
 But in fact when the grabbing was over 990
 It was the arm of 1 Hunter
 (That was grabbed) by 7 Parrot.
 Suddenly he dropped down again
 And bent back his shoulder joint.
 Then 1 Hunter was released
 By 7 Parrot.
 Only they did well.
 They weren't beaten by 7 Parrot,
 And as it was, 1 Hunter's arm was taken
 By 7 Parrot. 1000
 When he got to his house,
 It was just carrying his jaw that he arrived.
 "What did you bring back?" asked Shield Bearer
 then,

983-4. All translations agree on reading kakate 'jaw'; I nonetheless believe the couplet and the grammar justify ch u kaq' u te 'that it might hit his opening.' Similarly the second verb has universally been read as raquh 'shout'; I read raqih 'break'. See, however, line 1061.

986. I read taq'il.

987. Malamat from malah 'scatter'. The form is intensive causative: 'he was made to scatter completely'. The alternative reading of "Chimalmat" (wife of 7 Parrot) seems counterindicated by the singular verbs in the next two lines and by the implication later that Chimalmat was at home and ignorant of these events (line 1003 ff.).

993-4. The course of the fight is erratic in translation:

He crouched to grab him
 And tore his arm from the point of his shoulder
 (FX)

Who immediately shook him
 And tore violently at the end of his shoulder (BB)
 Pulled it suddenly
 And tore out his shoulder joint (NP)

Who immediately shook him
 And suddenly tore at his shoulder blade (GR)
 At that very moment 7 Parrot seized Hunter's shoulder

Threw him to the ground and tore off his arm
 (SJ)

And pulling on (his arm)
 He doubled it back from the end right to the shoulder (AR)

(Pulled off Hunter's arm), which fell off easily
 When it was bent back from the shoulder joint (BX)

Twisted (his arm) out
 And tore it out of (his) shoulder (RK)

But 7 Parrot seized his arm
 And pulled it up his back (WC)

Soon he shook it
 He tore it quickly from his shoulder (VC)

I know of no warrant for rendering tzak with 'grab, shake, tear, pull or twist'. Like BX, I read it as tzakah 'fall, sink, drop'. The second verb is clearly mehoh 'fold, double, bent' as AR has it. The text does not state that the arm was severed until line 999. Girard (1952, p. 76) notes that Codex Borgia (p. 18) depicts a bird carrying an arm.

1003. VR read the verb as kamih 'die' and then mis-translate that as 'try to kill'. The sentence is grammatically odd, and may represent the first appearance of polite address in the Popol Vuh. Polite address is also used by 1 Hunter and 7 Hunter to 7 Parrot (line 1067 ff.)—though they are disguised as orphans at the time—and to 1 Leg (line 1516 ff.). It is also used by Blood Girl to her father (line 2315 ff.) and mother-in-law (line 2438 ff.). The only use of the polite plural occurs in line 2311. Polite address does not occur in Cakchiquel; the Quiche forms are native, probably deriving from the abstractive ahavalal 'lordship' and the adjectival plural ahavalaq 'lordly' to give lal (sing.) and alaq (pl.). It is doubtful that they could have been developed earlier than the 14th century. It is notable that all uses of polite address in the Popol Vuh occur in that part of the text devoid of late Nahuatl influences (presumably no later than the 15th century). Hence it seems plausible to ascribe the stories of "7 Parrot" and "1 Hunter and 7 Hunter" and

 So that my jaw is just broken.

 Said 7 Parrot
 As he hung up 1 Hunter's arm.
 They were thinking it over, 1 Hunter
 And Jaguar Deer, and then they spoke
 To a grandfather —
 Completely white were the grandfather's 1020 hair and beard—
 And a grandmother —
 Truly humble was the grandmother too —
 They were just all bent over,
 Very old people.
 Great White Pig was the grandfather's name;
 Great White Coati was the grandmother's name.
 And what the sons said
 To those who were
 The grandmother
 And grandfather was: 1030
 "Let us accompany you
 And go to get our arm from 7 Parrot.
 We shall just follow
 Behind you.
Really these are our grandsons
Who are accompanying us.
Their mother is dead,
And their father,
And so they follow along everywhere

"Blood Girl" to the 14th century in something like their present form. See note to line 3292. The use of polite forms became very much commoner in colonial Quiche.

1006. Q'ax tok 'pain stab' apparently refers to demons who cause suffering and pain. It is a favorite term of abuse in the Popol Vuh.

1009. The verb is probably chuyuh (see line 1104). The translation 'unhinge, dislocate' rests on the authority of FX. I do not know where FX and others get 'shake, wobble' for q'axoh.

1016. The MS has xekeba.

1020. I am not certain of 'beard'; the phrase may also be read 'the hair of the head on the old man'.

1021. BX omits q'ut; the MS has cu.

1022. This should perhaps read kemal.

1023. It is of interest that FX reads this as 'hunch-backed'. Hunchbacked figures are common among the archaeological remains of the early centuries A.D. BX read 'could hardly walk' but it is clear that the verb means 'stooped, all bent over'.

1026. BX have nim for nima.

1035-41. That these lines are part of a quotation within a quotation was an insight of BB's, confirmed by the pronouns, although rejected or ignored by several later translators.

1039. Kotilavi (?). Qotolah 'to snake along', qotil

We might just give them away,
Because just removing jaw bugs

Will 7 Parrot look at it.

They said,
Those two sons.
"That's fine," they said then,
And so in fact they went.
And finally there was 7 Parrot
Before his throne,
When the grandmother passed by,
And the grandfather,
And playing along at it
Were the two sons behind them.
Then they passed
Below the lord's house,
And groaning was the mouth
Of 7 Parrot because of his teeth.
And when 7 Parrot saw the grandfather
And grandmother accompanying them,
"Where are you going, our grandfathers?"
Was what the lord said then.
"Just looking after ourselves, oh lord," they said
then.
"Who is it that looks after you?
Aren't those your children
Who are accompanying you?"

'repeatedly', and kotih 'surround' are possible bases of translation, but there seems no way of choosing among them: 'and so they follow and slither along then' or 'and so they follow along everywhere' or 'and so they follow around where it is'. The differences are glossed over in existing translations. I have opted for the second.

1041. The pronouns preclude WC's 'where one gives us alms'. The subject of the verb is 'we' and the object 'them'.

1042. FX and others have translated 'worms' here but the Quiche expression is not that definite; 'little animals of the jaw' would be fairly literal. The reference may be to a concept of intrusive spirits.

1053. This is a problem:

- To the corner of the house of 7 Parrot (FX)
- (To) the edge where 7 Parrot was lying (BB)
- To the place where 7 Parrot lay (NP)
- At the foot of the chief's house, 7 Parrot (GR)
- Before the house where 7 Parrot (VR)
- Towards their goal, where 7 Parrot (SJ)

- Towards the place where they found 7 Parrot lying (AR)
- And found 7 Parrot reclining (BX)
- Raised the seat the 7 Parrot (VC)
- Towards their goal, and saw 7 Parrot seated (RK)
- Where 7 Parrot lay (WC)

I believe the force of tzamal 'limit, edge' to be adverbial, and read q'u (u)bi (k) 'and there (was)' rather than kube 'sitting'.

1058. 'Playing' is omitted by RK.

1061. This expression may also be represented in line 984. I read the verb as raqoh. The MS has cu for q'ut.

1063. BX have ta x r il q'ut.

1067. The twins use polite address to 7 Parrot throughout this passage. It is interesting that when their sons pull an identical ruse on the lords of Hell, they use the familiar (line 4437).

1068. The implication is stronger in Quiche that of course older people would have someone looking after them.

The Second Creation

"Not at all,
Oh lord.
They are our grandchildren
And descendants,
But it is just we who feel sorry
For them,
Giving them a share,
A portion which we give them, oh lord,"
Was what the grandmother said,
And the grandfather.
And the lord was dying
Of the pain in his teeth,
But willy nilly he continued to bear it
And spoke:
"Would that I might beg before you
That you feel sorry for me.
What kind of poison can you make?
What kind of poison can you cure?"
He said then,
The lord.
"We just remove jaw bugs,
And we just cure eyes.
We just set bones, oh lord," they said then.
"That's fine. Would that you cure my teeth.
Really it hurts constantly.
It is unbearable.
I can't sleep from it,
That and my eye.
They just shot me,
Those two devils.
Since it began
I haven't been able to eat from it.
So now have pity on me.
Just agony is the throbbing
Of my jaw still
And my teeth."
"All right, oh lord.

1073-4. Mam 'man's grandchild'; iy 'woman's grandchild'.

1081. Literally, 'was finished off'.

1082. BB and SJ have ve for re.

1083. I.e., drew himself up. The line is obscure and variously translated:

So that it was by sheer will power that (FX)

I do not see the logic of the FX translation, which has been generally honored. I think the line is to be read xa ki nimak ka ch'ih chik, literally, 'willy nilly he endured further'.

1091-3. GR alludes to a parallel from Sahagún referring to a goddess of those who remove worms from teeth and eyes.

1095. The MS has ta for taḱ.

1102. BB has echavik.

1104. See line 1009. AR and WC read the verb as yubeh 'squeeze', others as chuyuh 'hurt'.

It must be a bug that's eating it.
 But a replacement should be put in,
 And your teeth should come out."
 "It might not be good to have my teeth out;
 It is just because of them that I am lord.
 My decoration is my teeth
 And my eyes."
 "We shall put them back again then,
 A replacement of ground bone."
 They would put back ground bone
 Which was only white corn.
 "Very well, take them out if you please," he said
 then,
 And then the teeth of 7 Parrot came out, 1110
 Only white corn were the false teeth that were put in,
 So it was just gleaming white from the corn he got in his mouth.
 At once his face fell,
 And he no longer looked like a lord.
 What was in his teeth finally came out —
 The brilliant blue inlays in his mouth.
 And then 7 Parrot's eyes were cured.
 When his eyes were fixed, that was the end of the silver.
 He didn't seem to feel any pain,
 But just continued to watch 1130
 While they finished
 And the pride went out of him.
 That was just the idea of Hunter
 And Jaguar Deer.
 And then 7 Parrot died,
 And then Hunter took his arm.
 And Shield Bearer died also,
 The wife of 7 Parrot,
 And thus was the loss of the wealth of 7 Parrot,
 Only the curer got it: 1140

1108. The particle ba 'probably' is omitted in all translations save BX. BB has q'oxuvik.

1111. The negative is omitted by RK and BB; the particle ba is again generally ignored.

1113-4. Tooth decoration was practiced among the Mayan lords as early as the 4th century A.D., T-shaped incisors being a common form. Turquoise inlays were also made. See line 7309. The appearance of 7 Parrot suggests that of extant mosaic masks from early Middle America with blue teeth and silver eyes. See line 843 ff.

1119. Chi too ulok offers translational difficulties; it is omitted by VR and translated 'help me' by everyone else. The verb is clearly tooh 'help' but the text does not say 'help me'. Something like 'take them that it may help out' is close to a literal reading. BX have q'u for q'ut.

1126. BX have kaval.

1128. Nothing in the text specifies that it is the pupils of his eyes which are stripped, as AR proposes. The specific reference of the expression u baq' u vach is 'the orbit of the eye'. In modern Quiche the phrase has become the generic word for 'eye'.

1131. The MS has cu for q'ut.

1135-6. There is some suggestion here of intentional punning: kam 'die', qam 'take' and perhaps q'ab 'arm', kaab 'two'.

The Second Creation

And jewels
That were meant to glorify him here
On earth.
The power of the grandmother,
The power of the grandfather had worked.
Then they took their arm.
It was put back and grafted to its joint
And well again
It became. 1150
But as for the death of 7 Parrot, they desired it,
So they had accomplished it.
They had seen evil in it.
It was boasting.
And so they went on again,
The two sons,
But it was the word of the Heart of Heaven
Which they did.

XII

And so these then are the deeds of Alligator in turn,
The first son of 7 Parrot. 1160
"I am the maker of mountains,"
Said Alligator.
And so Alligator
Was bathing at the edge of the water
When there passed by Four hundred sons,
Hauling a tree,
A post for their house.
Four hundred of them were walking along,
And they had cut 1170
A great tree
For the cross-beam of their house.
And there came Alligator
And arrived where there were four hundred sons.
"What are you doing,

1144. The copyist of the MS mistakenly inserted lines 1275-95 at this point, but crossed them out.

1146. Previous translators agree in making the verb here plural and transitive. It is singular and intransitive.

1148. BB and SJ read x tiki, ta x uk ok and translate 'and set it, and when they had put it back properly'. There is no warrant for a plural subject.

1149. BB and BX read utzohik x uxik and translate 'leaving it perfectly well'. VR read utzohik ix uxik 'and they located it very well'. SJ, RK, and WC read utz chik x uxik 'it was all well again'. VC has the BB reading but translates 'careful it was'.

1153. Cf. line 898. Note that scansion and translation are coerced by the utterance terminal -o.

There is also a myth about the 400 Cloud Serpents (Mixcohua) who were closed in a cave for four days and were then given maguey to suck and invented pulque (BB, p. lxxvii).

1168. For some reason SJ considers the word kabal to be Ixil. Girard (1952, p. 356) reports that in Chichicastenango the Flying Pole is cut into lengths at the end of the dance in which it is used, and given to the principales, who may use them only for house beams.

1170. VR read k'at 'burn' for q'at 'cut'.

1174. BX have k'a for q'u.

You boys?"
 "It's just a tree —
 We can't lift it."
 "Shoulder it.
 I'll carry it.
 Where does it go?
 What sort of use do you want from it?"
 "It's just the cross-beam
 Of our house."
 "All right,"
 He said then.
 And when he had lifted it
 He put it on his shoulder and took it
 To the door of the house
 Of the four hundred sons.
 "Why don't you stay with us,
 Son?
 Where are your mother
 And your father?"
 "I have none,"
 He said then.
 "Let us perhaps press you then
 To get some more chopped tomorrow,
 Another of our beams,
 A post for our house."
 "Good,"
 He said again.
 And then they took counsel,
 The four hundred sons.
 "Here is this boy: what should we do with him?
 Let us kill him,
 Because it is not good what he does:
 He lifts the beam all by himself.
 Let us dig a big hole here,
 And then we'll make him go down there in the hole.
 Go get it;
 Lift the dirt out of the hole, we'll tell him.
 And when he is bending over down in the hole,
 Then we can throw a big beam down there
 And thus he will die in the hole,"
 The four hundred sons said.
 And so they dug a big hole that went very deep
 And then they called Alligator.

1179. SJ, AR, RK, and WC put this line in the mouths of the boys, which is possible but not necessary. This makes for a split couplet.

1188. The MS has cu for q'ut.

1197. This line is usually omitted in translation. BB reads 'we'll pick you up', but this is incomplete and un-

1198. GR translates vabaxik 'point out', making it transitive and active. It is intransitive and passive. None of the translations is very tight here.

"We beg of you,
Go and dig some more earth.
We can't do it," he was told.
And he said, "All right,"
And then went down in the hole.
"Call up
When the dirt is all dug up
So that you have got really deep,"
He was told.
"Yes," he said,
And began to dig the hole.
Only the hole he dug was to save himself. 1230
He knew he was to be killed,
So he dug a branch in the hole to one side.
The second hole he dug
Was to save him.
"Well, how far along are you?"
The four hundred sons shouted down then.
"I'm digging it fast,
So I'll call you just as soon
As the digging is finished up,"
Said Alligator from down there in the hole. 1240
But he was not digging the bottom of the hole
Which was to be his grave,
But rather he was digging his own hole
As a shelter for himself.
And so when Alligator finally called up,
He was safe in the earth there in the hole when he 1219. The omission of the aspect marker here causes SJ and FX to read the verb as a noun but without much success. The English translation is quite literal.

1223. VR make this direct discourse in the second person. It is clearly third person, and the boys use familiar address to Alligator.

1224-5. BB and AR fail to read these two lines as direct discourse, which is confusing and requires ignoring the verb structure.

1233. FX reads u q'ab hul 'an arm of the hole' but there is no need to depart from the text. On the other hand, all the translators have ignored hun vi in the previous line, which has the same force. According to Girard (1952, p. 358) the Quiche duplicate this lateral hole when digging the hole for the Flying Pole Dance. Special offerings are made to "the spirit" in this side hole.

1235. An is omitted by FX and GR and is interpreted by others as an adverbial particle. From its placement it must be an auxiliary verb, probably anih 'run, hurry'.

1242. Mokikil is interpreted as implying 'as he was hired to do' by BX, which is plausible etymologically but less so poetically. I read muqikil 'tomb'. The ancestral Quiche buried their dead in small stone slab or masonry tombs with burial offerings. The Aztec custom of cremation was introduced in the 15th century (Wauchope 1948, p. 12).

1246. Ch u k'a is omitted in previous translations.

 Alligator called up from the hole. 1260
 But he stayed hidden down there,
 Shouting up from down in the hole.
 And so their big beam was dragged over by the boys

And then they dropped the beam right down into the hole.
 "He isn't there.
 He doesn't say anything.
 Let's listen now while he groans
 Until he dies,"
 They said to each other,
 But they whispered quietly, 1270
 And they just hid themselves, each one separately
 When they had dropped the beam down.
 And so he spoke.
 Then he groaned.
 He called out just once more,
 The moment the beam was dropped.

 What if further
 He had continued
 What he was doing,
 What he was working at?
 Why he would have become
 In fact the first,
 And imposed himself with us

1257. All the translations are loose about hun elebal 'one going'. BX suggest 'one or two elevations', which is good, but the proposed English translation is even closer to the Quiche.

1258. SJ's otherwise quite literal interpretation of this passage is flawed by his throwing this verb with the following one, a reading precluded by the verbal terminative vi. AR apparently follows him.

1265-6. The general translation is 'let no one speak', but this is neither grammatically nor poetically justifiable. Omission of aspect markers with imperative meaning is quite unlikely.

1268. Omitted by FX, who also greatly abbreviates the following lines.

1271. BB and GR have 'but they covered their mouths, looking at each other' but this is a mistranslation. VR's translation is also wrong.

1275-95. These lines were mistakenly copied after line 1144 in the MS but were crossed out; they constitute the only passage therefore for which we possess a duplicate text. They show that our text needs correcting as follows: in line 1283 mi has been omitted and in line 1290 chi has been omitted; in lines 1293-4 we should read oxib rather than oxih, xa vi rather than q'o ri, and ch eq'ovik rather than k e' eq'ovik. (In line 1275 BX have pupah for hu pah.) If this is the normal accuracy of the copyist, our text is indeed corrupt: the average would be one wrong line in 5 or 0.3 mistakes per line!

1281. VR convert this into a 'steep road', which is fanciful. VC corrects it.

1283. See note to line 403.

1286. The Mayan peoples generally have an acute sensitivity to rank order.

The Second Creation

And among us!
Even us,
The four hundred sons!" 1290
They said then,
And again they rejoiced.
"It will be, for the making of our wine, three (days),
And three (days) having passed
Let us drink to our home,
Our house,
Even we,
The four hundred sons!" they said.
"So tomorrow we'll see,
And the next day we'll see 1300
If the ants don't come
From the ground.
When he is rotted,
When he is decomposed,
Then it will console our hearts
When we drink our wine," they said.
And Alligator, there in his hole, heard
When the boys said, "the next day."
And on the second day,
Then the ants assembled. 1310
They ran about.
They swarmed around,
And then they got together
Under the beam.
Quickly they took in their mouths the hair
And they took in their mouths the nails of Alligator,
And when they saw it,
The boys (said),
"Isn't that devil finished off?
Just look at the ants! 1320
They have already gathered there.
They have swarmed there.

1293. The MS has quij, which might be ki' 'sweet' or kiy 'maguey'. It has been interpreted as chicha, which is related to neither. Pulque seems never to have caught on in Guatemala. It is more likely a form of balche, the preparation of which has been described by Redfield and Villa Rojas (1934, p. 38): "Four pieces of bark, about a foot long, are pounded with sticks and placed in a jar with two ficaras of water and a cup of honey. It is left three days and then tasted. If it is not good, more honey is added and it is allowed to stand till it comes out yellow, good."

1295. Laqabebal is translated 'foundation' by GR, SJ, AR, and BB, and 'dishes' by VR, but poetically it is parallel to kabal 'hut' and it is literally 'residence'. NP and WC omit it. VC gives 'at once'.

1302. The MS has pu for pa.

1305. VR somehow get 'burial' out of this. I believe the verb to be kuulih 'console'. Apparently so does WC. Other translators have apparently read kuluh 'sit down'.

1308. Ri ka is omitted in previous translations.

1309. SJ has ka ch u kabih.

1310. No particular species of ant is alluded to. The Popol Vuh later distinguishes fire ants or chay zanik (one of the Myrmecinae) and the large fierce cheken zanik called zompopo in Spanish (probably one of the Ponerinae). See lines 3777-8. There is also a smelly flying ant called 'female ant (r atit zanik)'.

1315. Hu mah is generally ignored in translation. VR's 'some of them' is inadmissible. The literal meaning is 'at a stroke'.

They have quickly seized his hair.
Those are his nails that you can see!
We did it!"

They said to each other then.
But Alligator was still alive.
He had just cut the hair off his head.
He had just bitten off his nails

In order to give them to the ants,
So that the fact that he had died
Would be known to the four hundred sons.

And so they started on their wine on the third day

And then all the boys drank heavily,
And all the four hundred sons got drunk
Until they knew nothing further.

And then their house was pulled down
On their heads by Alligator.

They were finished off
And all of them destroyed.

There were not even one
Or two of the four hundred sons who were saved.

They were killed by Alligator,
The son of 7 Parrot.

And since they died,
These four hundred sons,
They are said to have gone to be stars.

"The Group" is the name for them,
Though that may be a play on words.

And so we shall now tell
Of the destruction of Alligator in turn

By the two sons,
Hunter

And Jaguar Deer.

XIII

This then was the destruction,

The death of Alligator

When he was attacked again

By the two boys,

Hunter

And Jaguar Deer.

This was a further blow to the hearts of the sons:

The four hundred sons who died because of Alligator.

Only fish,

Only crabs

1349. I have adopted SJ's suggestion of 'play on words' for zaqibal tzihi. Other translators read tz'akabal tzihi 'lie' or translate the SJ reading as 'truth', both of which are possible. If the MS is accurate, it is indeed a play on words: it reads motz, perhaps the proper name of the Pleiades, identified with the five mutz or much 'eighties' or 'fistfuls' of boys, who were drunk (mutz), humbled (moch), and scattered (much).

1366. The MS has ta for tak.

1373 ff. A confused passage:

And from a leaf
Which grows in the trees and which is called ek
They made the large hands of the crab,
And the little ones from other smaller leaves called pahak.
And the shell and hands they made from a slab
And they placed it (FX)
They put on it a head of ek
Since ek is gathered in the woods where it is all around.
From that were made the big feet of the crab,
And from pahak the little feet.
They put on it a shell of stone
Which finished the back surface of the crab. (BB)
And put a head of eq on him.
(One collects eq in the forests.)
The crab's claws were made of that
But its small arms of pahak.
They put on him a stone shell
Which finished the crab's back. (NP)
They gave it a face of ek wood,
For ek wood is found everywhere in the forests.
They made the large claws of the crab from it,
Then the little claws of pahak.
They put on a stone shell to finish the back surface of the crab. (GR)
Having put on eyes of ek
From the male ek that there is in the brakes and woods,
Thus they gave it the appearance of a crab,
Giving it pincher extremities.
From fine grinding stone they made its stomach case
And the hard shell of the crab. (VR)
They put together its image out of the ek plant
(Ma ek grows in all the woods),
From which the claws of the crab were made,
But its thin arms were made from the pahak plant,
And they put a round flat stone on him
So that the hind quarters of the crab were flat plated. (SJ)
They gave it the appearance of (a crab) with a leaf of cocksfoot,
From that which hangs from the branches of the trees.
Thus the crab's belly was made.
From pahak they made him feet,
And they put a stone shell on him
Which covered his back. (AR)

They used cock flower
From the great cock that there is in the mountains
Which were the crab's pinchers.
They put a kind of bamboo on for the hands,
And a round stone for the crab's back,
A hollowed shell. (BX)

By means of a leaf of the ek plant
Which grows in all of the forests (. . .)
They made the trunk of the crab.
Its thin claws they made of pahak.
And for the shell which covered the crab's back and hind quarters
They made use of a round flat stone. (RK)

From a leaf of ek
That is in the woods
(They) made . . . the belly of the crab.
From a leaf of pahac
They made legs for it
And with a stony shellfish
They covered its back. (WC)

So it was they put its face cocksfoot
The parasite cocksfoot that there is at the edge of the forests
That similar to crab was Grass stems (glumas)
Its twisted limbs
They put whetstone on the back
The rear end of the crab
The carapace. (VC)

The confusions are obviously multiple. I have preferred the literal 'face' to the figurative 'image, appearance' or the obsolescent 'eyes' as the reading of vach. I do not know the grounds for reading mak as 'male' (VR), 'hang' (AR), or 'great' (BX), but prefer BB, who apparently relates it to makoh 'pick, gather, collect'. The other translators omit it. I agree with the majority that xul is clearly 'claws' not 'belly' (AR, WC), that koq is in this context 'shell' not 'turtle' (GR), and that zel refers to a worked stone, probably both round and flat, given its purpose. I derive my translation from zeleh 'cut'. None of the translations except VC comes to grips with hovohik in line 1378. Compare hovol in line 1416. Ek, which is called pie de gallo in Spanish, is a bromeliad (Tillandsia spp.). Pahak is identified by BX as a kind of bamboo, perhaps the giant Guadua aculeata formerly widespread in Central America. Miles (1965, pp. 243, 266) describes a Late Classic sculpture from Izapa which may illustrate the crab episode from the Popol Vuh.

Which was picked from the cocksfoot that is out in the bush.
And the crab's claws were bamboo,
And they also put on the shells of his legs,
And a cut stone for the crab's back,
Which resounded.
And so then they put his shell at the bottom of a cave
At the bottom of a great mountain, 1380
(Meavan was the name of the mountain)
To destroy him.
And so when the sons came along
They found Alligator in the water.
"Where are you going,
Son?" Alligator was asked.
"I am not going anyplace;
I am just hunting my food,
Boys," said Alligator then.
"What is your food?" 1390
"Just fish,
Just crabs.
But there aren't any more
That I can find.
Two days ago I left off being fed.
I can't stand going hungry any longer,"
Said Alligator to Hunter
And Jaguar Deer.
"Well, there is a crab down there in the canyon,
A really huge crab! 1400
If you are lucky
You can probably eat him.
He just bit us.
We tried to catch him,
But we were afraid of him.
Unless he has gone, you will catch him,"
Said Hunter
And Jaguar Deer.

1381. Meavan is a mountain placed by BB (pp. 58-9) north and west of a bend in the Chixoy River, about 25 miles west of Rabinal.

1393. BB has ri for vi.

1399. BX have ulo for ula.

1401. Apparently an idiomatic expression from q'ihih 'to divine'. The sense appears to be 'it would augur something', though previous translations vary loosely around this theme. The poetic scansion is problematic here, too.

1406. There is little agreement:

Or, if you like, shall we go get him? (FX)

Not for anything would we go get him. (GR, BB, AR, WC)

We wouldn't go after him again (NP)

Don't you want us to go get him? (VR)

We have no desire to catch such a thing. (SJ)

But perhaps he has not gone; go get him. (BX)

After that we won't try to get him. (RK)

We wouldn't go to get him. (VC)

Except for BX all the versions read qa chapa for ka chapa, a reading which should more properly require ka qa chapa. The BX translation is textually tighter and agrees with the sense better: only eight lines farther on the twins refuse to go.

1409. BX have chi for k i.

The Second Creation

Go along and show me,
Boys,"
Said Alligator.
"No, we don't want to; you just go;
It isn't hard to find; just go along the river.
You'll discover it right at the foot of the mountain.
It's rustling there at the bottom of the canyon;
you'll just go right to it,"
Said Hunter
And Jaguar Deer.
"Nonetheless,
Have pity on me.
He won't be found, boys.
You come along and I'll show you —
There are just lots of birds.
Come along and you can shoot them.
I know where they are,"
Said Alligator then.
They promised,
So he went ahead of the boys.
"Actually you might not really get him
Unless we should get him back for you.
Although we did not eat him
Because he just started biting
So that we fell flat.
We went down.
And then he was frightened that we were crouching
As we went down.
And just a little later
We couldn't get him.
So it would be good for you to crouch
As you go down,"
He was told then.
"All right," said Alligator.
And so they went
And accompanied Alligator.
They went along
And came to the bottom of the canyon,
And there to one side was the crab.

1416. VR omit hovol, unaccountably translated 'shell' by BX.

1419. La k'i ba is read 'alas!' by BB, SJ, and GR. The others insert 'oh', except for BX and WC who read 'in vain then'. The last is the only translation that takes in any of the meaning of the particles.

1427-8. FX reads xe lahih 'under the stone'. BB, GR, SJ, AR, and RK read x elahik to arrive at 'humility'. VR somehow read 'the boys took pity on him' and VC 'wounded'; BX and WC have 'the boys were convinced and accepted' from lahih 'understand'. The MS has xelahic.

1429-30. Only BX and VC properly include the negative in the first of these two lines. There is no indication in the text that the passage is a question, though only BX and VR make it declarative. None of the versions indicate the transitive verb in the second line. I read x k as a compound aspect marker. Cf. line 1452.

1435. VR and BX translate pak'alik 'right side up'. SJ has them on their bellies. VC has 'discover'. The general meaning 'crawl, crouch' is common to the remaining translators. BB has ka for k u here.

- Bright red was his shell at the bottom of the canyon,
Which they had already bewitched.
"All right," Alligator also rejoiced.
He just wished
That it would go in his mouth,
Because he was really famished.
He wanted to eat it.
He just tried to get down flat.
He tried to go in crouching,
And the crab was walking alone
So he came back out again.
"Didn't you get it?" he was asked then.
"Not at all.
He is just crouching.
He was walking.
Just at first by a narrow margin
I didn't get him.
So it would probably be good
If I go in upside down," he said then.
And so he crouched again
When he went down.
And when he got down in
Only his kneecap showed there any longer. 1470
It was finally made to come undone
And it collapsed.
The great mountain fell on his chest.
He was no longer able to move,
And Alligator became stone.
Thus then was the destruction of Alligator
By the sons, Hunter
And Jaguar Deer,
"The Maker of Mountains" according to
His former bragging, the first son of 7
Parrot.
Under the mountain
Called Meavan
They destroyed him then.
Only magic destroyed him,
The second one to glorify himself.
And then there was the other one.
We shall tell
His tale.

1448. GR declines to accept 'red' here, commenting, "Elle n'était pas cuite, cependant!!!" (p. 23). His reading is 'the crab pushed his back forward'. I am unable to divine how he gets this. SJ translates 'soft', but vakavoh is clearly a color augmentative.

1449. BX have kate for q'ute.

1457. FX translates aqanik 'climb', which is possible but seems to confuse the action.

1463. None of the translations quite captures this line, literally 'only first a little more'. WC has 'almost'.

1470. Only FX's rendering of ch'ek as 'knee' can be independently confirmed, as AR footnotes, and 'u vi 'u ch'ek is 'the cap of his knee'.

1473. This should probably read ch u k'ux.

1474. BB has tzol for zol.

 "The second of the sons of 7 Parrot
 Is another who should be destroyed.
 That is just my word,
 Because it is not good
 What they do before the earth.
 They surpass the sun

 In importance,
 And that is not as it should be.
 Reduce him down then 1510
 There
 In the east,"
 Then said 1 Leg
 To the two sons.
 "Very well,
 Oh lord,
 I have seen them already,
 But it was not good what we saw.
 Do you not exist?
 And are you not exalted, 1520
 Oh heart of Heaven?"
 Then said the sons,
 As they wished to accept
 The words of 1 Leg.
 And there was 2 Leg keeping busy,
 The destroyer of mountains.
 Only a little he would stamp his foot over the ground,
 At a stroke toppling
 Great mountains
 And small mountains thereby. 1530

1506. VR throw in the moon for good measure. VC takes it back out.

1507-8. I agree with SJ and AR here; other translations differ slightly.

1510. Previous translators have interpreted this as bochih 'praise, flatter, entice'; I read it as bochih 'reduce'.

1517. I read il for i.

1528. The MS has zu for zuq.

What are your names?" said 2 Leg.
"We have no names.
We are just hunters,
And we are just trappers through the mountains.
We are just poor.
We have nothing at all, oh son.
Just little mountains,
Just big mountains we travel, oh son.
There is one big mountain that we saw
Just coming here.
It was growing;
It was climbing really high.
It was just shooting up;
It goes way up beyond all the mountains,
And there weren't even one
Or two birds
We could catch before it, oh son.
But is it really true that you fell all the mountains,
oh son?"
Said Hunter
And Jaguar Deer to 2 Leg.

1550. BB has u for i.

1552. To confess one's name was considered imprudent, though it was obligatory for a defeated warrior and safe for a conquering one, as in the Rabinal Achih or, for that matter, in European chivalry.

1554. The reference is to birdlime trappings, according to BB and others. Whether this technique was used by the aboriginal Maya is not established.

1561 ff. BB and GR introduce 'cliffs' here; FX has 'fragrance'; AR, RK, WC, and VC read kaqik 'redden' for my ka k'iyik 'it grows'. The poetic scansion supports the BX reading, which I have followed.

1566. RK suggests that the mountain was so high that even birds were lacking, but the implication is that the hunters were facing the mountain rather than on it.

The Second Creation

Where is it then?
 If you did see it,
 I can knock it down then.
 Where did you see it now?"
 "It's right there at the sunrise,"
 Then said Hunter
 And Jaguar Deer.
 "Good,
 Take up our road,"
 They were told then,
 The two sons.
 "Not at all, unless you go in the middle
 And stay between us then,
 One on your left
 And one of us on your right,
 Because we have our blowguns.
 If there are birds we'll be shooting,"
 They said then,
 Rejoicing
 At being able to practice
 Their shooting.
 And so it was that as they were shooting,
 The pellets of their blowguns were not earth.
 They just blew on the birds as they shot
 And 2 Leg was amazed.
 Then the sons arranged their fire,
 And they roasted their birds before the fire.
 And one of the birds they covered in back with plaster.
 White was the earth they put on it. 1600
 "Well, here's what we'll give him when he is good and hungry,
 And when the smell of our birds reaches him and does him in.
 Thus it is that the earth will be hardened
 On the back of the bird by us.
 We have cooked it in earth,
 Just as he will be buried in earth.
 Indeed the great
 And wise,
 Forming one,
 And Shaping one,
 May then be planted,

1583. BX have q'u for ka.

1599. Zahkab 'plaster' is probably from Yucatec zacab 'white earth'. If so, it is one of the few identified Yucatecan loan words in Quiche.

1602. I read ch'akoh 'defeat'.

1605-6. There is general agreement that this play on words is intentional. Explicit simile is relatively rare in Quiche, but see line 1613 ff.

1607 ff. The difficulty of this passage has been remarked by various translators, but the difficulty seems to me to be resolved by referring it to the god 1 Leg, elsewhere addressed as Former and Shaper in notably similar passages.

May then brighten," said the sons,
 "Because he just longs for
 The remembrance
 Of what is planted
 And worked over,
 Just like the longing
 Of the stomach of 2 Leg,"
 They said to each other, Hunter
 And Jaguar Deer. 1620
 Then they roasted the birds,
 And the roasting was done to a golden (brown).
 They were done;
 They dripped with grease —
 The birds' backs,
 And the odor was becoming absolutely delicious.
 So it was that 2 Leg
 Longed even more to eat.
 He was just drooling;
 His mouth watered; 1630
 He just kept gulping
 And swallowing
 His spittle,
 His juices,
 From the deliciousness of the birds.
 Then at last he begged,
 "What is that you're eating?
 It smells really delicious to me.
 Give me a little," he said then.
 So then they gave one bird to 2 Leg, 1640
 And it was his undoing,
 For then he finished the bird.
 Then they went on
 And they came
 There to the east
 Where the great mountain is,
 And there was 2 Leg,
 Whose legs and arms were just crippled,
 He could no longer stand it,
 Because of the earth he had swallowed 1650
 On the back of the bird
 He had eaten,
 And so there was no longer
 Anything he could do again to a mountain.
 He couldn't succeed

1618. Previous translators read k'ux 'heart', for my q'ux 'stomach'. FX omits it. Either will do, but the humor of the play on 2 Leg's hunger seems to me to imply my reading. The MS has gux.

1630. BX have u p u chi.

1642. As RK notes, 7 Parrot and his two sons are all overthrown by eating.

1649. BX have bi for vi.

1654. SJ has xub(b)an.

The Second Creation

In overthrowing it.
 And so he was tied up by the sons,
 And his hands were tied behind him.
 His hands were taken care of by the sons,
 And both of his ankles were tied.
 And they knocked him down to the ground
 And buried him.
 And thus was the destruction of 2 Leg
 Which was just by Hunter and Jaguar Deer.
 Uncounted are their deeds
 Here on earth.
 And so we shall now relate
 The birth of Hunter and Jaguar Deer,
 But first we have told
 About the destruction of 7 Parrot
 And Alligator
 And 2 Leg
 Here
 On earth.
